

LSE Undergraduate Political Review

Journal Submissions 2018

Our call for journal submissions has now opened! Submit now to see your dissertation or research published in the LSE's first undergraduate journal.

The LSE Undergraduate Political Review is a platform that encourages and publishes undergraduate political research and academic work on a global scale. This year we are proud to be broadening our scope, encouraging applications from the top institutions across the world.

Publishing your work in the UPR journal gives the opportunity to widen exposure of your research through our online and physical dissemination of the journal, and the simultaneous publication of your work on Google Scholar. It is a great opportunity to get the recognition your hard work deserves!

Details:

- The deadline for journal submissions is July 13th, 2018
- The journal will be published in February 2019
- If selected, you will liaise with a UPR associate editor to make your piece suitable for journal formatting
- Submit your work to: lseupr@lse.ac.uk

Requirements:

- Topic of a broadly political nature
- Word count of between 4000 and 6000 words (including notes, excluding bibliography)
- High quality, well-cited and backed up by substantive academic evidence.
- Fluent English
- You must be an undergraduate student to submit an application

To find out more:

Email: lseupr@lse.ac.uk

Go to our website: <http://blogs.lse.ac.uk/lseupr/>

Facebook: LSE Undergraduate Political Review Instagram: lseupr

*Submission does not guarantee publication.