

Students as Producers

An International Perspective

Helen Keegan @heloukee

LTI @ LSE NetworkED seminar series - 05/11/2014

Students as active collaborators

- Learners as active agents rather than passive consumers
- Staff and students working in partnership, blurring boundaries
- Authentic engagement - transformative potential?
- Resistance can be linked to consumerist discourse
- Challenges traditional roles and hierarchical relationships
- Giving up control, tensions, unknown outcomes

HEA: Engagement through partnership

Healey, M., Flint, A. and Harrington, K. (2014) Students as partners in learning and teaching in higher education. York: Higher Education Academy. <https://www.heacademy.ac.uk/engagement-through-partnership-students-partners-learning-and-teaching-higher-education>

"student as collaborator and producer" (Taylor and Wilding 2009)

"student as co-producer" (McCulloch 2009)

students as co-authors (Healey, Marquis and Vajoczki 2013a).

"learners and teachers" (Cook-Sather 2011)

"co-creators" in the learning experience (Bovill, Cook-Sather and Felten 2011; Bovill 2013)

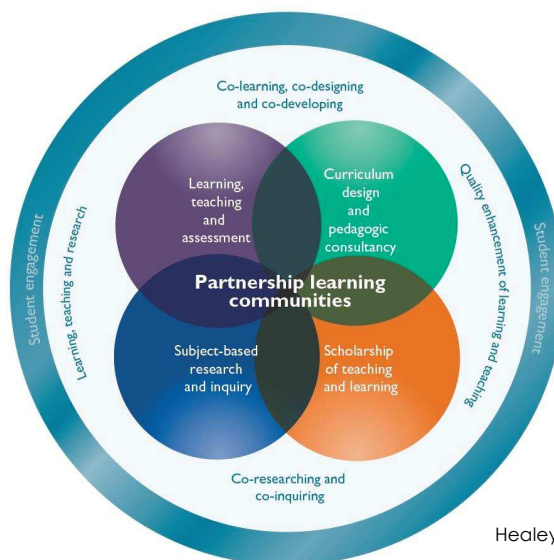

"students as consultants" (Cook-Sather 2009; Crawford 2012)

"students as change agents" (Dunne and Zandstra 2011; Healey 2014)

"students as change entrepreneurs" (Ryan et al. 2013)

"student engagement in educational development and quality enhancement" (Gibbs 2013)

Students as partners: an overview model

iCollab, ELVSS and MoCo360

Ultimate goal - develop new ways of seeing and learning through collaborative study of internet technologies and emerging forms of digital creativity, learning from one another's disciplinary perspectives and cultures.

iCollab

Multiple platforms, social technologies

PRODUCTION: Student-produced OERs (2011)

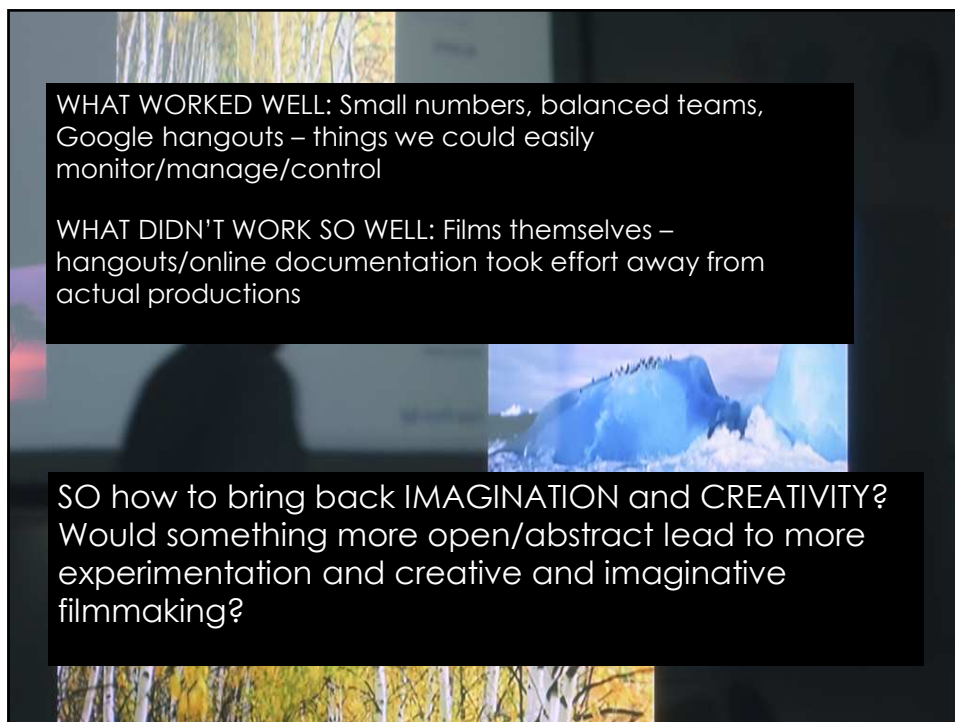

PRODUCTION and PEER REVIEW ASSESSMENT: Transmedia Reports (2012)

PEER TEACHING and CRITIQUE: Geolocation and research (2013)

RESPONSIVE, JUST IN TIME CURRICULUM DEVELOPMENT

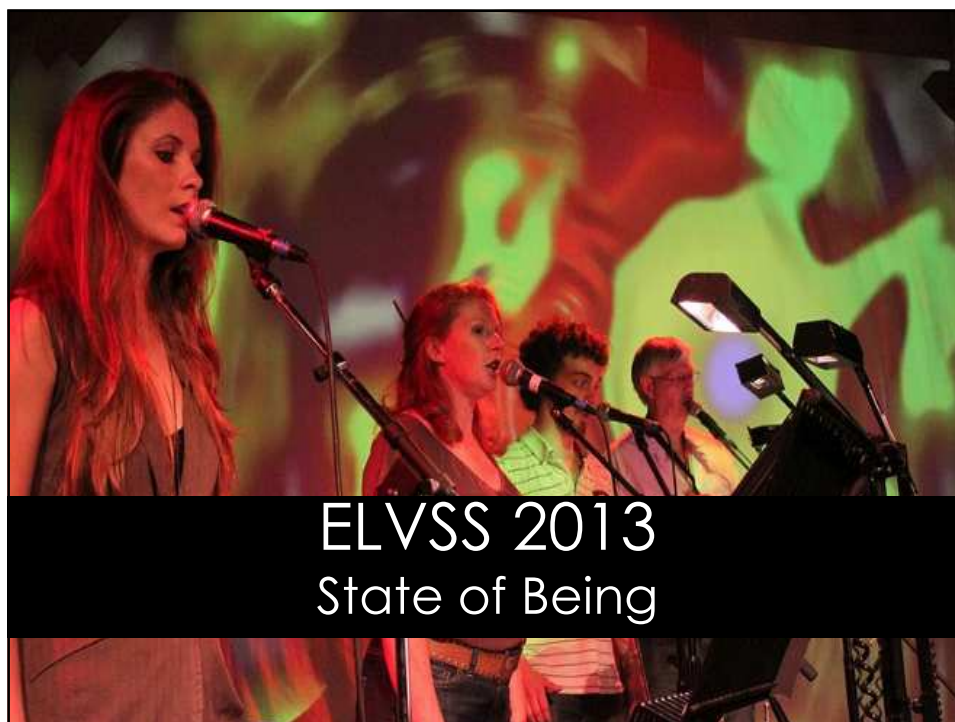

WHAT WORKED WELL: Small numbers, balanced teams, Google hangouts – things we could easily monitor/manage/control

WHAT DIDN'T WORK SO WELL: Films themselves – hangouts/online documentation took effort away from actual productions

SO how to bring back IMAGINATION and CREATIVITY?
Would something more open/abstract lead to more experimentation and creative and imaginative filmmaking?

State of Being is an inspiring, sometimes harrowing, journey through the human psyche. The opera presents a powerful series of emotional states of being that depict an individual's struggle for survival and redemption. The opera interpolates live and recorded music with video and theatre to produce a compelling synaesthetic experience.

Contains scenes of a sexual nature

Challenges

- Semester dates
- Imbalanced student numbers
- Too hard to manage/monitor
- Too 'out there'? Too right brained? Too much?
- Too much frustration
- Platform preferences (tutors/students – disciplinary/cultural)

Personal fav - The Last Job by Russell

23 March

hello everyone. I have an idea for a mobile film and i think it could work with heaps of multiple people or a couple of people in the different areas working in a small group.

The (not complete) idea is to do with Place. We would film people/yourself spinning around with a similar frame showing a place behind them. my idea is to then hopefully link each of these places to a page/splitscreen/something that shows the location on a map and then ask the person to write a short blurb about what they like/don't like about the place - what brought them there etc.

These pieces might not even have to be displayed as a film but be an interactive webpage or something instead.

If anyone is interested in helping me develop the idea further please comment below 😊

From Global Projects

“Students and academic staff have different expertise to bring to the process, and there will be times when staff may appropriately have more voice, and other times when students may appropriately have more voice. Co-creation is not about giving students complete control, nor is it about staff maintaining complete control over curriculum design decisions. The relative levels of control over decision making and appropriate levels of partnership are likely to depend upon the context...”

(Bovill 2013b, p. 464)

to Global Community

“Developing a co-learning, co-inquiring, co-developing, co-designing and co-creating approach challenges traditional power relationships and involves a cultural change in how much of higher education is organised. Building genuinely inclusive student and staff academic communities of practice is challenging – that is, both difficult and destabilising, effortful and provocative. Change can be experienced as deeply threatening to one’s personal and professional identities, and the degree of resistance that can be mobilised to prevent having to learn new ways of learning and working should not be underestimated for all parties. However, it is also true that where resistance is most pronounced, the potential for powerful and transformative learning and change is greatest.”
